

What's New?

WITH SWEETIE PACARRO

Studies have shown that although adults will likely wake up to the blaring sound of a traditional smoke alarm, 66 percent of children will sleep through it. That's why keiki under the age of five are twice as likely to perish in house fires.

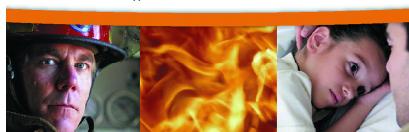

However, more than 96 percent of children tested woke up within seconds of hearing their parent's voice act as an alarm, and now there's a product that allows parents to record a warning and escape message in their own voice — the SignalONE Safety Vocal Smoke Alarm.

A parent's voice is not only the most effective way to awaken a child, it has also been shown to keep them calm and prevent panic during an emergency situation.

The Vocal Smoke Alarm is not a replacement for your current smoke alarm system, but an additional safety net. It's easy to install and greatly enhances a family's safety by increasing the likelihood that all family members receive the earliest possible warning in the event of a fire.

The Signal One Smoke Detector is available from Elite Security Systems for $85 (cost for unit only; price does not include installation, etc.). For more information, call Elite Security Systems at 732-5552.

Aloha from Ricky

The year seems to be flying by, with summer already upon us.

The warm, sunny weather may get you thinking about fulfilling that longtime dream of a swimming pool in the back yard. Our cover story this month is about a company that does just that — Steve DeBiasi and his crew at DeBiasi Pacific have been designing beautiful outdoor spaces, including swimming pools, since 1983.

Since school is out, Island keiki may be spending more time at home — and on the computer. Do you know what your child is up to? In this month's "Security Tips," Lois Miyashiro tells you about the growing concern of cyber safety, and how to keep your child safe from Internet predators.

The debut of our "Recipe Corner" in our last edition garnered many favorable comments from readers. It's back this month with another tasty dish from Side Street Inn. Owner Colin Nishida reveals the recipe for his famous fried rice. Stay tuned for more recipes from the Islands' top chefs.

Finally, we would like to welcome SHOPO (State of Hawaii Organization of Police Officers) to Elite Connection. SHOPO will be sharing their latest news with us in each issue beginning with this one.

Enjoy the summer!

Staying Safe

LOIS MIYASHIRO'S TIPS
ON SAFETY AND SECURITY

Recent headlines have brought social networking Web sites — particularly MySpace, a site popular with teens — into the spotlight.

The main concern with these Web sites is that teenagers post personal information online, making them vulnerable to predators.

Here are some online safety tips for parents:

- Talk to your children about the dangers that lurk on the Internet and advise them never to give out personal information, such as address, school or telephone number in a public message such as a chat room or bulletin board.
- Get to know the services your child uses. If you aren't familiar with how to log on, ask your child to show you. Find out if there are ways for parents to block objectionable material.
- Encourage your children to tell you if they receive suggestive, obscene or threatening messages. If such a message is received, forward a copy to your Internet service provider and ask for assistance.
- Teach your children that people online may not be who they seem. Someone who says they are a 12-year-old girl, may very well be a 40-year old man.
- Set reasonable rules and guidelines for computer use. Discuss them and post them by the computer as a reminder.
- Keep the computer in a high-traffic area, such as the family room — not in your child's bedroom, where it may be difficult to monitor their activities.
- Get to know your kids' online friends, just as you get to know their school friends.

Steve DeBiasi

Times have changed in the world of swimming pools.

Not too long ago, the typical residential pool was rectangular, with a deep end to accommodate belly flops off the diving board.

According to Steve DeBiasi, of DeBiasi Pacific, a local swimming pool/landscape contractor, those days are gone.

"Customers are asking for natural elements that depict our tropical lifestyle. The big trend these days is natural lagoon-style saltwater pools with sand bottoms," says DeBiasi. "People are opting for unique-shaped, shallow pools — customers rarely ask for diving boards, and our insurance carriers don't allow us to build diving boards anymore anyway because of liability issues."

DeBiasi Pacific specializes in exterior construction with an emphasis on recreational facilities.

"If it exists on a landscape architectural plan, we can build it," says DeBiasi. "Think of us as a general contractor for exterior work — decks, walls, pool cabanas, and of course, swimming pools. And we are licensed general contractors so we can provide the electrical and plumbing work that comes along with it."

DeBiasi has built a solid reputation over the past 23 years. Although he started his landscape contracting company 23 years ago, he got into the business shortly after arriving in Hawaii in 1979.

"I came for a visit and that was it," says the Connecticut native. He quickly fell in love with the Islands and within a few months, found a job as a landscape laborer with renowned Honolulu landscape architect, Jim Hubbard.

DeBiasi ventured off onto his own in 1983, launching his own landscape contracting business, but his big break came seven years later when he started doing

SPOTLIGHT: Kika Matsumoto

After more than 26 years in the incentive and convention entertainment business, Kika Matsumoto has heard it all.

"I'm on 'Volume 26' of excuses from entertainers on why they're late," laughs Matsumoto, owner and president of Kika, Inc. "Brain aneurisms, girlfriend giving birth in the garage, the DX7 (synthesizer) flew out the side window — some are pretty creative and I give them credit if they come up with something new."

But working with entertainers and keeping them on task is all part of the business she loves.

"There's a lot of excitement, a lot of stress, a lot of pressure," she says. "We have so many safety nets to prevent things from going wrong because there are no second chances."

Whenever a big group comes to town, chances are that Kika, Inc. is involved. Matsumoto says there's some confusion among many folks when it comes to conventions.

Kika Matsumoto

We named the company after our customers!

(Above): Kika, Inc. coordinates entertainment for more than 3,000 events per year on five different islands.

"Many people think that when companies such as Coca-Cola, State Farm, Apple Computer and IBM come here they are on a convention," explains Matsumoto. "They're actually incentive groups where the company is picking up the tab, not the individual, so more money is spent — the company wants to show them a good time as a reward."

And Kika, Inc. is dedicated to showing its clients a good time when they're in the Islands.

"We handle anything that comes under the description of entertainment — but it has to be legal," says Matsumoto. "We don't do strippers, but we do Polynesian shows, orchestras, name talent from the mainland, actors, jugglers, mimes, acrobats ... whatever a client wants, we can put together." Some popular theme events these days include USO shows on the Battleship Missouri, riverboat parties, carnivals nights and Hollywood theme parties. These productions can involve a solo entertainer or more elaborate events involving 300 entertainers.

Kika, Inc. coordinates entertainment for over 3,000 events per year on five different islands. The company also books entertainment for the mainland U.S., Japan, Canada, and Europe and provides in-house entertainment for a handful of hotels, including the Halekulani and The Kahala Hotel & Resort.

It's interesting work for someone with an equally interesting background.

"My dad is Japanese-American, from Hilo and was stationed in Italy with the 442nd," Matsumoto explains. "He met my mom in Italy — my second home — and we moved to Hawaii when I was almost 4 years old."

She explains that there are many Japanese-Italians in Hawaii who share her background.

"I grew up with lasagna and sushi," Matsumoto says. "There are a whole slew of us running around and we call each other 'cousin' — most of our fathers were decorated World War II veterans."

Her name, "Kika," is actually a nickname given to her by a childhood friend in Trieste, Italy, who couldn't pronounce her given name, "Caterina." She explains that in Hawaiian, "kika" can mean "tiger," which ironically was her father's nickname while he was in the service. She was often called "little tiger," which she deems appropriate because of her love for animals, particularly cats.

Matsumoto's path toward the visitor industry began when she was a senior at Radford High School. Like many teenagers, she was unsure of what her future would hold. The vice-principal at the time told her that maybe she should look into a career in tourism. She was intrigued and heeded the advice, earning a degree in Travel Industry Management from the University of Hawaii, and working her way up in the business.

"I was the Incentive Convention Manager at Aloha Airlines when I decided to start my own company," says Matsumoto. Today, Kika, Inc. has built a solid reputation in the Islands, with seven full-time office employees, and various part-time stage and event people on the Neighbor Islands and Honolulu.

Matsumoto credits a "great staff" to the success of the company.

"The clients know that we care and that they can trust us to take care of them," she says. "Our company motto has always been, 'the client is always right ... even when they're wrong,' she laughs.

"DeBiasi Pacific"

 work for a

park project in Guam. The opportunity eventually led to a branch office there.

"We always did water features as part of landscaping, but soon we started doing swimming pools — that's something very odd for a landscape contractor — but there was a big need in Guam for us to build swimming pools, so that's what we did."

And that's what he's still doing today — but now, work on Oahu keeps him and his 10-member staff quite busy.

"The economy is so good right now so we're able to focus on high-end residential swimming pool projects here on Oahu," says DeBiasi.

Although the residential projects keep his phones ringing, DeBiasi Pacific also specializes in recreation and resort facilities with some big name clients over the years, including Hyatt, Hilton, Westin, Outrigger and Marriott.

Regardless of whether the client is a residential customer or a five-star hotel, DeBiasi enjoys the challenges of balancing a client's dreams with their pocketbook.

"We like to work with owners and design and build to people's budgets," he says. "And many people don't realize you don't have to spend a fortune to have a swimming pool."

He says the typical cost of a residential pool these days is between $60,000 to $100,000. And contrary to popular belief, maintaining a pool is quite inexpensive, whether you do it yourself or hire someone to do it for you.

"The average cost of maintaining a residential pool if you do it yourself is about $40 to $50 a month, but if you don't have the time, you can hire a pool service for just about $150 a month," says DeBiasi. "And it doesn't take a lot of time — the average pool requires about 15 to 20 minutes a week to maintain — not much more work than an aquarium."

With long, sunny summer days in full gear and the kids home from school, the company is working to keep up with customer demand.

"In Hawaii, the pool business is definitely a steady, year round business," says DeBiasi. "But we definitely see a surge in business in the spring when the weather starts getting warmer. We get lots of calls then because folks want their pools ready when their kids get out of school."

He says it usually takes about 60 days to build a pool, sometimes less.

Although DeBiasi has created hundreds of swimming pools, he remains passionate about his work.

"The biggest reward is that we're constantly creating beautiful environments. I do most of the design, but many new homes already have a plan, so we work off of architectural plans, too," he says. "But the biggest challenge is being creative and coming up with new ideas all the time."
